'Oedipus Rex'–Oldest Living Play Opens Tonight For 4 Night Run

by Valerie Hill
Daily Universe Writer

Suspense, pace, and mounting excitement explain the play, "Oedipus Rex," which will start Wednesday at 8:15 p m in the Smith Auditorium and continue through Saturday night

"Oedipus Rex" is a tragedy of fate which deals with a prophecy saying that Oedipus will one day unknowingly kill his father and marry his mother

It was performed for many years in the Greek theaters before Sophocles finally wrote this version down Since then for the 1500 years it served as a model for all drama design

Directed by Dr Harold I Hansen, chairman of the speech department, the story tells how a king, ignorant of his unnatural situation, tracks down every particle of evidence that ultimately brings him face to face with his own pollution

He finds that one of the men he killed in a quarrel was his father, the former king

He also finds that he was married to his father's wife, and he had children by her When the truth comes to light dramatic sequences follow

Most of the play takes place on the front steps of the palace, which are of different heights and levels The pillars of the palace are hollow and covered with scrim. Suspended from the ceiling with light directed through them, they will give a glowing effect

"Oedipus," next to "Hamlet," is one of the two most famous plays written. Also it is the oldest play in the world still being regularly produced.

Dr. Lael J Woodbury, Provo, takes the part of Oedipus. Jocasta, his wife and the only main woman character, is played by Georgia Faux, also of Provo.

Dr Hansen is assisted by technical director Robert Struthers Winnifred Bowers is in charge of costume design

According to Dr. Hansen, seats are still available with presentation of student activity cards at the Smith ticket booth

Freshman Court Council Fails In Violator Counsel Efforts

by Sally Arnold

Brigham Young University's freshman court council has failed in its efforts to locate and counsel with students responsible for the melee at the frosh court earlier this quarter

According to John Wilcox, Calgary, Alberta, Canada, efforts of the council to carry out its purpose have been frustrated by difficulties in determining "names" of students involved in the court mishap

The council had announced a meeting for Monday evening At this time the council planned to counsel students responsible for the October mischief, and then send a recommendation to the administration for any further measures. The meeting was cancelled Monday

According to Wilcox, it is believed that there are about 14 students involved in the frosh court trouble. The council has been able to verify the name of only one of these students

Wilcox also said a report of what has been done by the council will be prepared immediately and turned over to Dr Henry L Isaksen, student coordinator

From Dr Isaksen the matter is expected to be placed in the hands of Dean of Students Wesley P Lloyd.

Probably no further action will be taken on the matter until after Thanksgiving, since Dean Lloyd will be out of town until that time

Religion's Place Today Unlimited Says Apostle

by Barbara Miller

Development of man's religion can and should be apace with his mechanical advances, declared Hugh B. Brown, assistant of the Twelve Apostles of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Elder Brown in a devotional speech Tuesday, placed strong emphasis on the ability of man to become more perfect by emulating the Creator.

"Basic to all activity is faith in ourselves, in God, and His power and love. . . if we are to succeed in the stupendous undertaking of living in the modern world," declared the church leader.

Given time, pointed out Elder Brown, man can become more perfect by using his intelligence, meaning light and truth, and faith and by following the teachings of the Father.

The relationship between man and God is that of parent and child, and "since like begets like, man can become more like Him through faith and knowledge."

Elder Brown stressed that there is no limit or bounds to what man may do in the field of religion and that advances in this area should surpass the mechanical accomplishments of modern time.

He brought out the two "fundamental requisites" for man in this atomic age They are awareness and aliveness and "put a purpose in the pep" of the young generation which must face and go beyond the world problems.

Summarizing his speech, Elder Brown declared, "You live in the greatest age of all time . . . but certain things change not You are related to God through faith and intelligence

"Keep clean in thought, word, deed, aspire, look up, seek answers and seek for God"

Men are reminded that Thursday evening is the deadline for calling the coeds to confirm the date.

Senate Hears Request For 'Crusade' Aid

College participation in the "Crusade for Freedom" program was stressed to the Brigham Young University student Senate Monday evening.

Ann Murphy, college representative of "Crusade for Freedom," briefed a special session of the Senate on opportunities for college students to contribute original literature for broadcast over Radio Free Europe.

The Senate viewed a motion picture on "Crusade for Freedom." The picture showed how progress has been made and is being made to further this cause.

Methods used by the Soviet Union to propagandize against the western free world were included.

At a regularly scheduled meeting Wednesday evening the Senate will discuss legislature concerning the length of student phone calls, the organization of the Senate subcommittees, and special sessions of the Senate.

Also on the agenda are various reports from active subcommittees.

U of U Student Charged With Attempted Arson

A complaint has been issued charging Robert L. Parker, University of Utah student, with attempted 3rd degree arson.

Parker is charged with attempting to set fire to a paper napkin 'Y' outside the Smith Fieldhouse on the Brigham Young University campus Thursday night during the concert of the Berlin Philharmonic orchestra.

Maximum penalty, according to Arnold C. Roylance, Utah county attorney, is 1 to 2 years imprisonment.

Freedom Of Press Lauded At Collegiate Press Meet

Maintaining complete freedom of the collegiate press was stressed throughout a three-day conference of the Associated Collegiat Press in Clevland, Ohio, last weekend.

Brigham Young University was represented at the meet by Bob Pratt, art editor of the Banyan; Sally Arnold, campus editor of the Daily Universe; and Dr Oliver R. Smith, chairman of BYU's Department of Journalism

More than 800 college journalists from schools in 37 states were told that today's college paper is stronger editorially and has more freedom in many cases than the metropolitan newspaper.

According to John Tebbel, chairman, Department of Journalism, New York University, today's metropolitan newspapers editorial pages are no longer effective. "They have stopped talking to the readers and begun talking to themselves," he said

Information and discussion sections aimed at newspaper and yearbook editors and business managers highlighted the three-day meet

According to the BYU delegation much interest was shown in the 1955 Banyan which was displayed with other "All-American" yearbooks during the conference. The book was earlier rated All-American by the ACP.

Unsavory . . .

Dear Editor,

May I refer to The Springboard, Nov 7, and particularly an unsavory remark about faculty members "trying to pray themselves into heaven at assemblies"

No doubt much is to be desired and should be corrected in the mode of prayer of many members of the Church. Certainly constructive suggestions or factual explanations would be in better taste than the unfactful attempted quip by writer Waddell.

Most of the material in this column is typical of journalistic jargon which currently consumes much newspaper space and is neither humorous, interesting, informative, nor accurate.

In our pleas for changes here and improvements there, could we have newsprint with more fact, more accuracy in analysis, more clearcut information, more constructive criticism, and less off beat, off the cuff, off key, roundabout remarks, ramblings and suppositions of would-be journalists?

Just Peaceful . . .

Dear Editor,

I am a peaceful student (have been in my six years of BYU schooling) and I don't desire to start a controversy. I realize that BYU has a tremendous problem of over-congestion. However, one of my "pet peeves" is the fact that students habitually stand in doorways and entrances to carry on conversations causing the pedestrians to virtually fight their way through conversationalists to enter or exit from rooms or buildings.

This brings up the article in The Springboard written by one Dix K. Waddell in the November 7 issue of the Daily Universe. I quote "We opened the library door and stood speaking to a friend who stood across and down the steps from us."

This, it seems to me, is invting the conversation to be interrupted! And Wadell wanted the intervening students to apologize! I give accolades to those students who did, but I believe that it should have been Waddell and the other conversationalist who should have done the apologizing, if any apologizing was needed.

A moral to be gained from this letter is: don't carry on conversations in entrances, doorways, or any paths of pedestrian circulation. This will help alleviate the already crowded situation and tight schedules

SOME STUDENTS who are better educated in the fine arts than are the majority of us have been complaining about the conduct at concerts and at other high-brow entertainment.

Those of the aforementioned sentiments think it wiser to wait until a selection is finished before clapping—or whistling"? They also think that when there is a slight pause in a "movement" we should not "buzz buzz" to our neighbors.

OF COURSE we wouldn't want to hurt their feelings by telling them that we are showing our appreciation by whispering, and that we clap as soon as it seems a piece is nearly finished to indicate how much we actually know about music; and of course, we must be the first (no one must beat us in being the first) to clap!

Why, some high-brows even indicate that the service units ought to learn what their service should consist of instead of standing about gossiping among themselves and telling stories while people wander around the hall hunting for seats and yowling kids play around the doorways. The nerve of some people —wanting everybody to be perfect. . .?

'Better Baby' Contest Win Starts Career

by Richard Kramer
Daily Universe Writer

VETERAN movie and television worker, 16-year old Bonnie Petty, is a freshman at Brigham Young University.

Miss Petty, who started her career by winning the "Better Babies" contest sponsored by a Los Angeles newspaper, was interviewed by BYU audiences in Penrose Sycamore in "You Can't Take It With You."

Since the time of the baby contest, she has played major roles as Julis in "The Tender Trap," Mrs. Stolgraven in "The Solid Gold Cadillac," Character woman in "Anastasia," and George Bernard Shaw's "St. Joan."

AS ST. JOAN she auditioned at the Hollywood Academy Awards Theater for movie director Otto Preminger. Mr. Preminger is best known for his movie "The Man with the Golden Arm."

BYU students may remember Miss Petty's reading of St. Joan which she did at the freshman assembly in September "St. Joan" is Miss Petty's favorite play.

Last spring she was named the best actress of a high school tournament of one-act plays at the Pasadena Playhouse in California.

A director from Windham, Ill., who was in the audience saw her performance and was so impressed he offered a job to her this summer theater.

IN WINDHAM the California girl appeared in "The Solid Gold Cadillac," "The Tender Trap," and "Anastasia."

Some Hollywood actors and actresses who are her personal friends are Natalie Wood, Gale Storm, Rod Steiger, Spring Byington and Glenn Ford, with whom she appeared in "Jubal."

When asked why she chose to attend BYU she answered, "I have always wanted to come to the 'Y.'"

AFTER attending school in Mexico City for one summer the actress became interested in the field of languages.

If her ambition to become a professional actress does not materialize she intends to investigate the possibilities of foreign travel and work.

Exhibition Responsibilities Laid To Painter, Buyer Craziness

"IF THEY ARE crazy enough to paint things like this, I'm crazy enough to buy them."

This was the reason Solomon R. Guggenheim gave for beginning his modern art exhibit, now on display in the Eyring Science Center, according to Dr. Conan E. Mathews.

This explanation was offered in Brigham Young University's first annual art round table discussion, which was held last week in the foyer of the Eyring Science Center.

Over a hundred persons listened to a panel of six BYU graduate instructors give a brief sketch of the life of a famous modern artist whose paintings are represented in the exhibition, displayed in the mezzanine of the science center.

THE PANEL'S scholarly and highly technical approach to the highly controversial subject succeeded in stimulating but one question for the audience—a request to have explained why one of the drawings on display at the right of the panel was named "Serene."

"No one knows. Only the modern artist knows why he names a particular work as he does," was the answer of Ray Hellberg, panel member who went on to explain it was not "our purpose to defend this type of art, but to define it."

THE DEFINITIONS included such terms as "emotional experience derived from color," "spiritual in art," "Non-objective or abstract aesthetic art," "cones, cubes and cylinders" and "emotional intuitive art."

"What good it it?" asked panel member Maynard Gunter to stimulate interest. Dale Fletcher and Hellberg both attempted an answer.

Warren B. Wilson, chairman of on-campus art exhibits committee, stated that the round table discussion and the Guggenheim exhibition of modern art was to "further our understanding in this type of art."

Other members of the panel include Evelyn Hemmele, Lee Knell, Dale Fletcher, and Ezrel Anderson. The artists exhibiting included Josef Albers, Lyonel Feininger, Albert Gleizes, Wassily Kandinsky, Paul Klee, Fernand Leger, Moholy Nagy, Valmier, Vordemberge, Xeeron.

NCAA Meets On Probation Bans

DETROIT, (INS)—Executive Director of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, Walter Byers, refused to make any comment Tuesday on reports that probation bans against Texas A&M and Miami (Fla.) are lifted.

The bans were placed against the schools for "abuses in recruiting and aiding athletes."

Byers, also one of the NCAA "policemen," would not comment on the reports until later today at the end of the second session of the powerful NCAA meeting in Detroit.

Meanwhile, it was hinted that the session could brew trouble aplenty for some of the nation's "name" schools."

Bowl-Bound Cowboys Cats Next Opponent

With the Skyline crown already perched atop the Cowpoke head, the clash against Brigham Young would be a dismal anticlimax, except that the Pokes have everything riding on this one.

WYOMING, with a 9-0 record is in select company among the nation's major unbeaten teams — Oklahoma, Tennessee and Princeton.

BYU would like nothing better than to knock them from among the notables.

Wyoming coach Phil Dickson knows full well that BYU is anything but a "give-up" ball club New Mexico found it out and so did Denver. After racking the Cats with nine straight TD's, the Pioneers found their own goal line being penetrated five straight times.

THE COWBOYS, led by tailback Jim Crawford, currently the nation's leading ball carrier, sport a power-packed single wing offense. It'll be the Cougars' job to stop Crawford who has amassed a total of 1,081 yards in nine games. Crawford, all by himself, has carried the ball more yards than the entire BYU team.

The big 195-pound back leads the Skyline in scoring with 90 points—13 TD's and 12 conversions.

ANOTHER Cowboy to watch is quarterback Larry Zowada, who leads the circuit in passing with 819 yards—36 completions in 79 attempts.

On the other side of the coin, since BYU's offense hinges almost exclusively on passing, the Cowboys will have to have to come up with a good aerial defense.

Wyoming's line is light, but tough and fast BYU's line is light. The Cowpokes have been stingy in giving yardage, their opponents having chalked up just 274 yards per game.
